Burglary suspect arrested with help from "See Something, Say Something"

DATE OF RELEASE: March 9, 2017   Time: 1345 hours

West Covina Police Officers arrested a 50 year old La Puente man for burglary after witnesses reported seeing him in the neighborhood acting suspiciously. On Wednesday, March 8, 2017 at 1748 hours, several callers reported the suspect was seen driving around in the area of the 2200 block of W. Corak Street, West Covina. One caller stated he saw the suspect exit his vehicle and walk to the rear yard of one residence. When West Covina Officers arrived, they spotted the suspect in front of the location he was seen at and detained him. The location was checked and a screen to a rear window had been removed with the window open. The resident returned home during the investigation and confirmed that items from within the home had been moved and placed by the open window.

Arrested for suspicion of burglary was Salomon Rodriguez Ayub, 50 of La Puente. He is currently held at the LA County Jail with a bail set at $50,000.00.

This is clearly another successful example of the "See Something,Say Something" campaign. Residents noticed something suspicious and acted on it by reporting their suspicions to the West Covina Police Department.

If you See Something unusual, something you know shouldn't be there, someone's behavior doesn't seem quite right, or a vehicle that is strange to the neighborhood, Say Something - because only you know what is normal and what is not in your neighborhood.

To report suspicious activity, contact the West Covina Police Department. Describe specifically what you observed, including:

- Who or what you saw;
- When you saw it;
- Where it occurred;
- What they look like; and
- Why it's suspicious.

If there is an emergency, call 9–1–1.
